

THE "APPEAL" AND THE V. & T. RAILROAD.

Yesterday a representative of the V. & T. R. R. shops called at this office and announced that Mr. Yerington desired the paper kept out of the V. & T. shops, the R. R. office and everything connected with the V. & T. management.

The cause of this order is unknown to us, nor have we sufficient curiosity to investigate.

The APPEAL has never been the organ of the V. & T. R. R., and is never likely to be.

There is one institution in the city of Carson not dominated by the V. & T. R. R. Company, and that is the MORNING APPEAL.

The APPEAL is not published in the interests of any individual or corporation in the State of Nevada.

Its promise to preserve an independent course in politics has not met with favor in certain quarters, and its future will not be any more satisfactory to those parties than its past.

The APPEAL has endeavored to get along peacefully with its neighbors and with the railroad company, but since the corporation seems determined to reopen old quarrels, we will content ourselves at present with saying that while we are not seeking a fight we would not go a step out of the way to avoid it, and if the Company insists upon it we are ready to make a match on any basis that may be named.

The other day, when Jay Gould was walking along a railroad track, studying how he could get his clutches on some more property. An express train came along, and would have run over the absent minded millionaire but for the fact that a baggage master grabbed him by the neck and yanked him out of danger. Before leaving he thanked the man who saved his life, but the dispatches do not say he did anything further.

In every country, except the United States, the relative importance of men, women and children stands thus:

MEN.
WOMEN.
Children.

But in this land of liberty:

CHILDREN.
WOMEN.
MEN.

—Illustrated American.

The APPEAL is in receipt of several letters from young ladies visiting various watering places on the Coast. These letters are in some respects, models of watering place correspondence and would be delightful reading for the proprietors of the resorts. Such letters, to insure publication, should always be accompanied by cash.

The Central Nevadan exultingly alludes to a phenomenon at Battle Mountain as follows: Candelaria can keep the earthquakes, Carson its cloud visages, and Reno its phenomenal parks, (?) but Battle Mountain must have its lunar rainbow.

Baseball playing on the house roof is the novel way in which a number of factory hands in New York spend their dinner hour. A long cord is attached to the ball and then tied to the chimney, so that the ball cannot get out of reach.

General Alger Passes.

General Russell A. Alger of Michigan, with his traveling companions on his Pacific coast trip, passed Reno Friday morning in his special car "Michigan," attached to the regular overland train. As the train pulled out the General was seen standing on the rear platform of his car, was quickly recognized by some who knew him, and smiled his acknowledgments. The General looks young, strong, vigorous, and carries himself with a soldierly bearing that marks him a stalwart and reliable member of the old guard. —Reno Gazette.
